YEARS ON STAGE

Guerra’s professional path began in Puerto Rico, where she became a founding member of Las Nenas del Swing. On September 10, 1998, the group released Rompe Corazones, an eleven-track tropical and merengue album through R&R Music. Guerra sang lead vocals on several of its best-known tracks, including “Chicle Bomba,” “Desearía,” and “Me Faltas Tú.”

That recording career led directly into her next chapter: from 2000 to 2006, she toured as a supporting vocalist for Melina León — six years of stage discipline that became her bridge into reggaetón.

MELINA LEÓN · 2000–2006

The six years Leslie spent touring with Melina León became the defining turning point of her entertainment career. Working alongside musical director Félix Márquez and sound engineer Ramón Pabón, she built relationships that would later open the doors to Héctor & Tito—and ultimately, Don Omar.

In 2006, those relationships led to the defining chapter of Guerra’s international touring career.

Nine Years with Don Omar

Recruited by Félix Márquez to perform with Héctor & Tito and invited by Ramón Pabón into Don Omar’s touring production, Guerra served from 2006 through 2015 as the “King of Reggaeton’s” exclusive touring female vocalist — including stages shared with Daddy Yankee, Arcángel, and Wisin & Yandel. Her work is permanently documented on King of Kings: En Directo, released by Machete Music and broadcast through DirecTV in 2007.

FINAL CHAPTER · J ÁLVAREZ · 2015–2020

Exclusive touring vocalist from 2015 through 2020 — nearly two decades on stage that placed her among the few women to hold long-term featured vocal roles across multiple internationally touring reggaetón productions.

“Relationships built on stage became the foundation of everything that followed.”

OPERATIONS & RELATIONS

FOUNDER

Building the Business Behind the Music

While performing internationally, Guerra simultaneously built an extensive career in business operations and executive support.

From 2001 to 2006, she served as a Human Services Specialist with the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), helping determine eligibility for federal disaster assistance following major national emergencies, including the September 11 attacks and Hurricane Katrina.

She went on to spend seven years at Venetian Productions, advancing from Web Producer — overseeing as many as ten concurrent productions — to Head of Compliance, where she managed a team of four and helped organize the customer service department for the company’s parent organization, KLMA, establishing workflows and operational standards for the team.

As her career evolved, Guerra moved into label operations at Arrow Management, where she coordinated daily operations across multiple corporate entities, managing tour payroll for a touring company of up to thirty — dancers, technicians, and musicians — alongside personal expense management. She later supported executive A&R operations at Sony Music Latin, coordinating artist travel, studio scheduling, vendor relationships, and budget tracking across a major Latin roster.

The combination of live performance experience and executive operations became Guerra’s defining professional advantage. Having worked both on stage and behind the scenes, she developed a unique understanding of the creative, technical, and business challenges facing entertainment professionals through leadership in compliance, label operations, artist logistics, and customer relationship management (CRM).

Building the Platform

Drawing upon both halves of her career — performance and operations — Guerra founded portfolioID, a professional identity platform she conceived, designed, and built from concept to deployment. She defined the platform’s architecture, feature set, and bilingual user experience, drawing directly on her own career as the platform’s first real-world use case: a professional record built on verified credits, documented history, and proof — not assumption.

EDUCATION & CONTINUED STUDY

Guerra continues to invest in her professional and technical education, including a Bachelor of Applied Science (BAS) in Supervision and Management at Polk State College and CS50’s Introduction to Artificial Intelligence with Python through Harvard University’s School of Engineering and Applied Sciences. She previously completed a Computer Support Technician Diploma at Florida Technical College (NUC University), graduating with High Honors and a 4.0 GPA.
